

ART APPRECIATION

SABADO, ALFRED
SAULAN, BRIAN PAUL
RAMOS, JOHN CZELXI
MABASA, ROLANDO
KILAPKILAP, ROBERT

PORTRAIT

Photographing a portrait isn't just about capturing a face—it's about freezing a flicker of someone's soul. Behind every expression lies a lifetime of joy, pain, wonder, and resilience. As I looked through the lens, I realized I wasn't simply documenting a person—I was learning to see them.

Their subtle expressions, the way their gaze met or dodged the camera—it all told me things words never could. Portraits remind me that connection doesn't always need conversation; sometimes, presence is enough.

~ Brian Saulan

“A GLANCE CAN TELL A THOUSAND UNTOLD STORIES.”

DOCUMENTARY

Documenting the mall scene felt like stepping into a living novel. I wasn't posing anything or asking for smiles—I was simply observing, waiting, witnessing real life unfold in all its beautiful mundanity. Kids racing down halls, tired parents clutching coffee, the silent nod between two strangers—these weren't just moments, they were stories in motion.

Documentary photography taught me to appreciate authenticity. It's a celebration of what is, not what's curated. And sometimes, that's where the real magic lives.

~ Alfred Sabado

“EVERY ORDINARY PLACE HOLDS EXTRAORDINARY MOMENTS.”

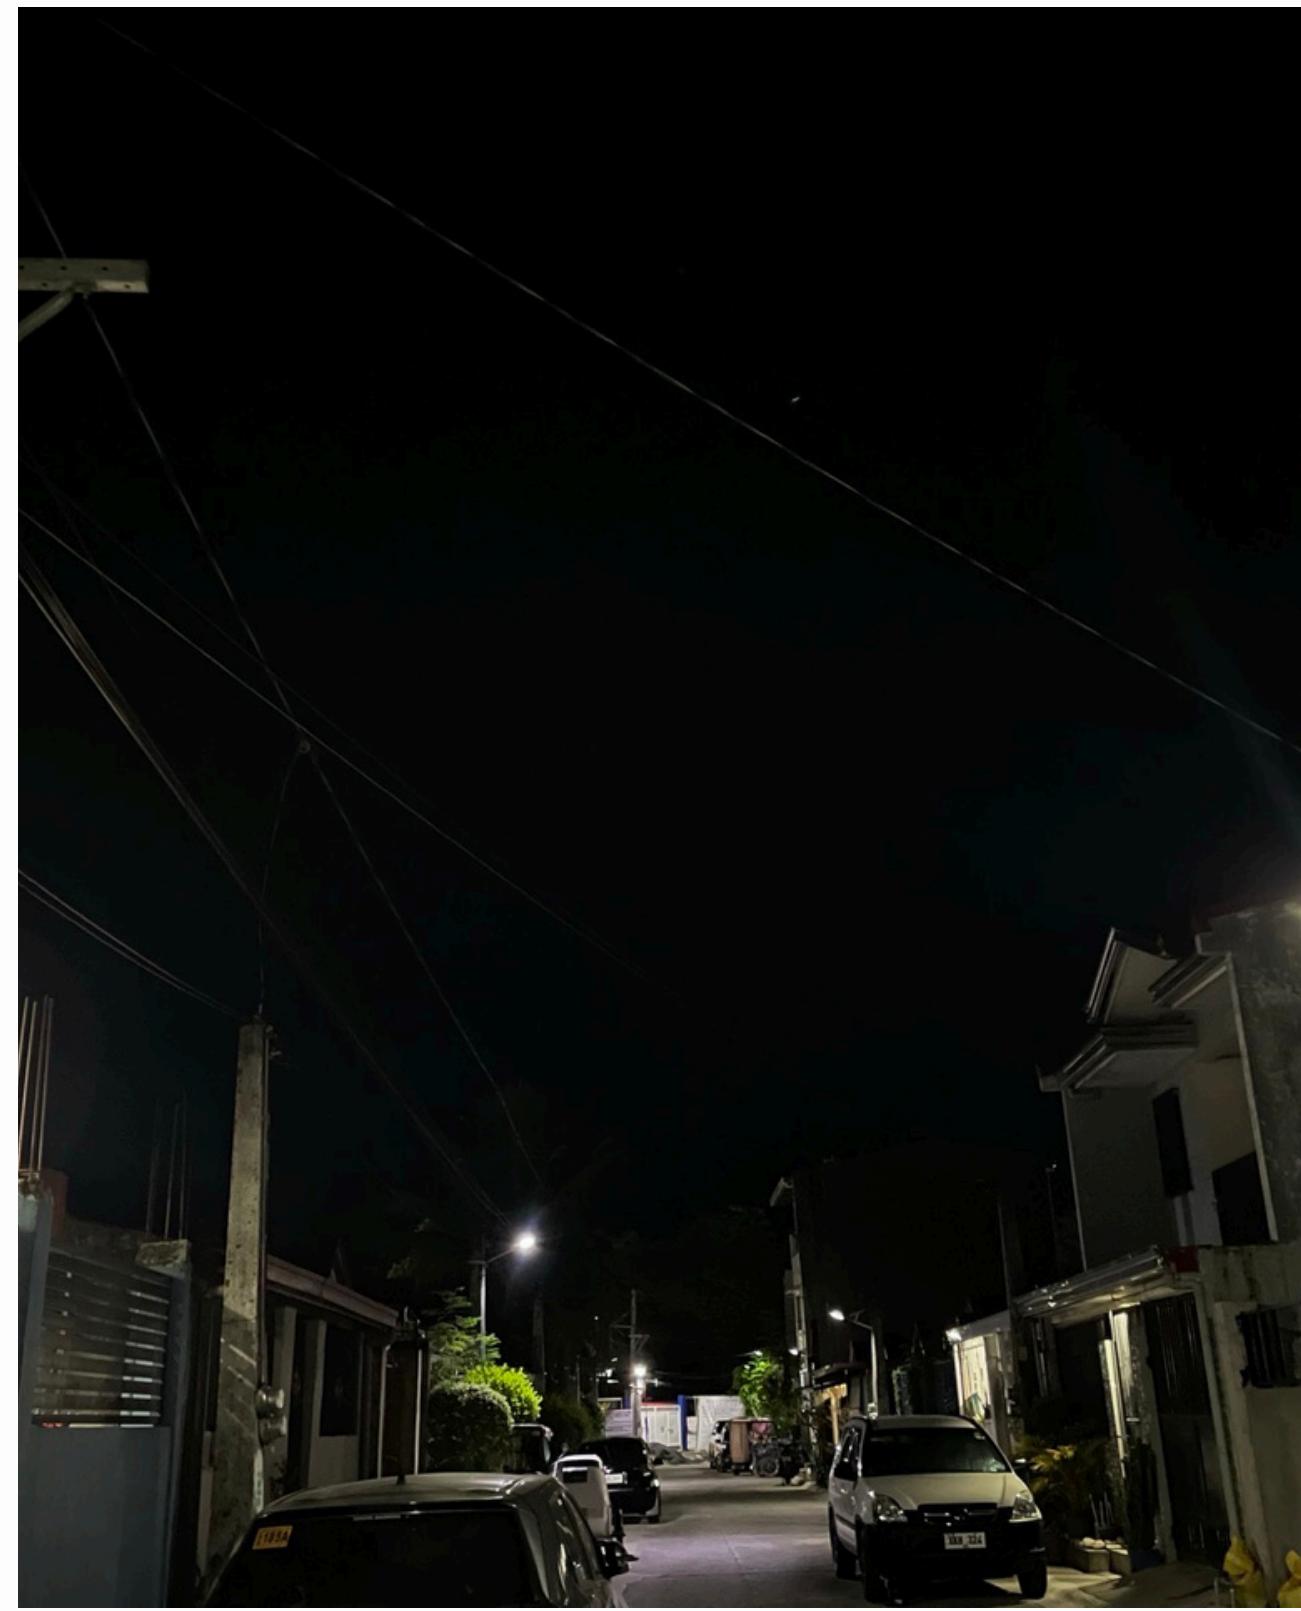

STILL LIFE

Still life photography turned into a quiet meditation. I arranged and rearranged simple objects—fruit, books, mugs—and with each frame, I saw them transform. What seemed mundane became meaningful when lit with intention and viewed with care.

It was a lesson in attention: that beauty hides in the overlooked, and storytelling doesn't always require movement or noise. It reminded me that even the stillest moments in life can carry profound emotion if we choose to look closely enough.

~ Robert Kilapkilap

“EVEN THE QUIETEST OBJECTS HAVE A STORY TO TELL.”

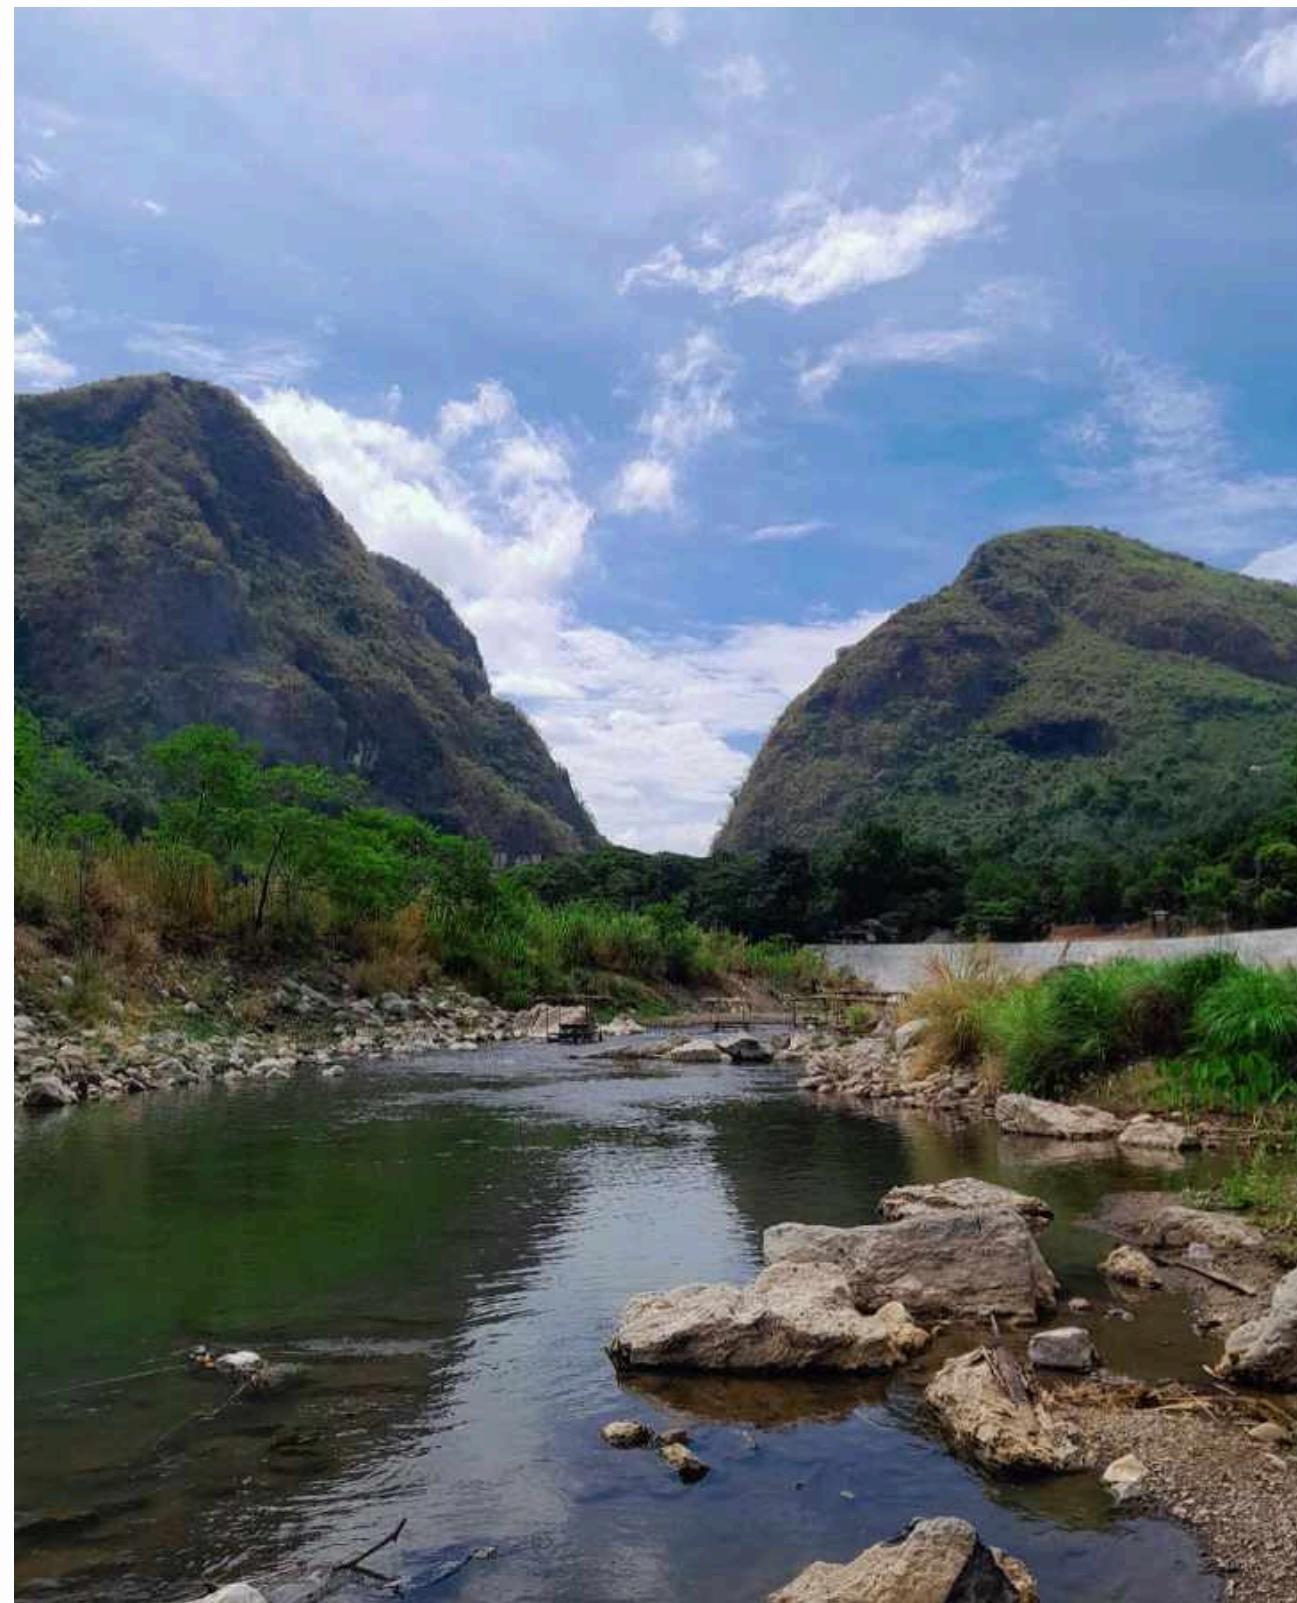

NIGHT

The night challenged me—it stripped away the safety of natural light and forced me to become a student of shadows. But in that darkness, I found a new kind of beauty: glowing streetlamps, reflections on wet pavement, neon signs humming softly to no one in particular.

Photographing the night made me feel like I was capturing secret moments the world only shows when it thinks no one is looking. It reminded me that even in our darkest hours, there's always a little light, waiting to be found.

~ John Czelxi Ramos

“DARKNESS IS JUST LIGHT PLAYING HARD TO GET.”

LANDSCAPE

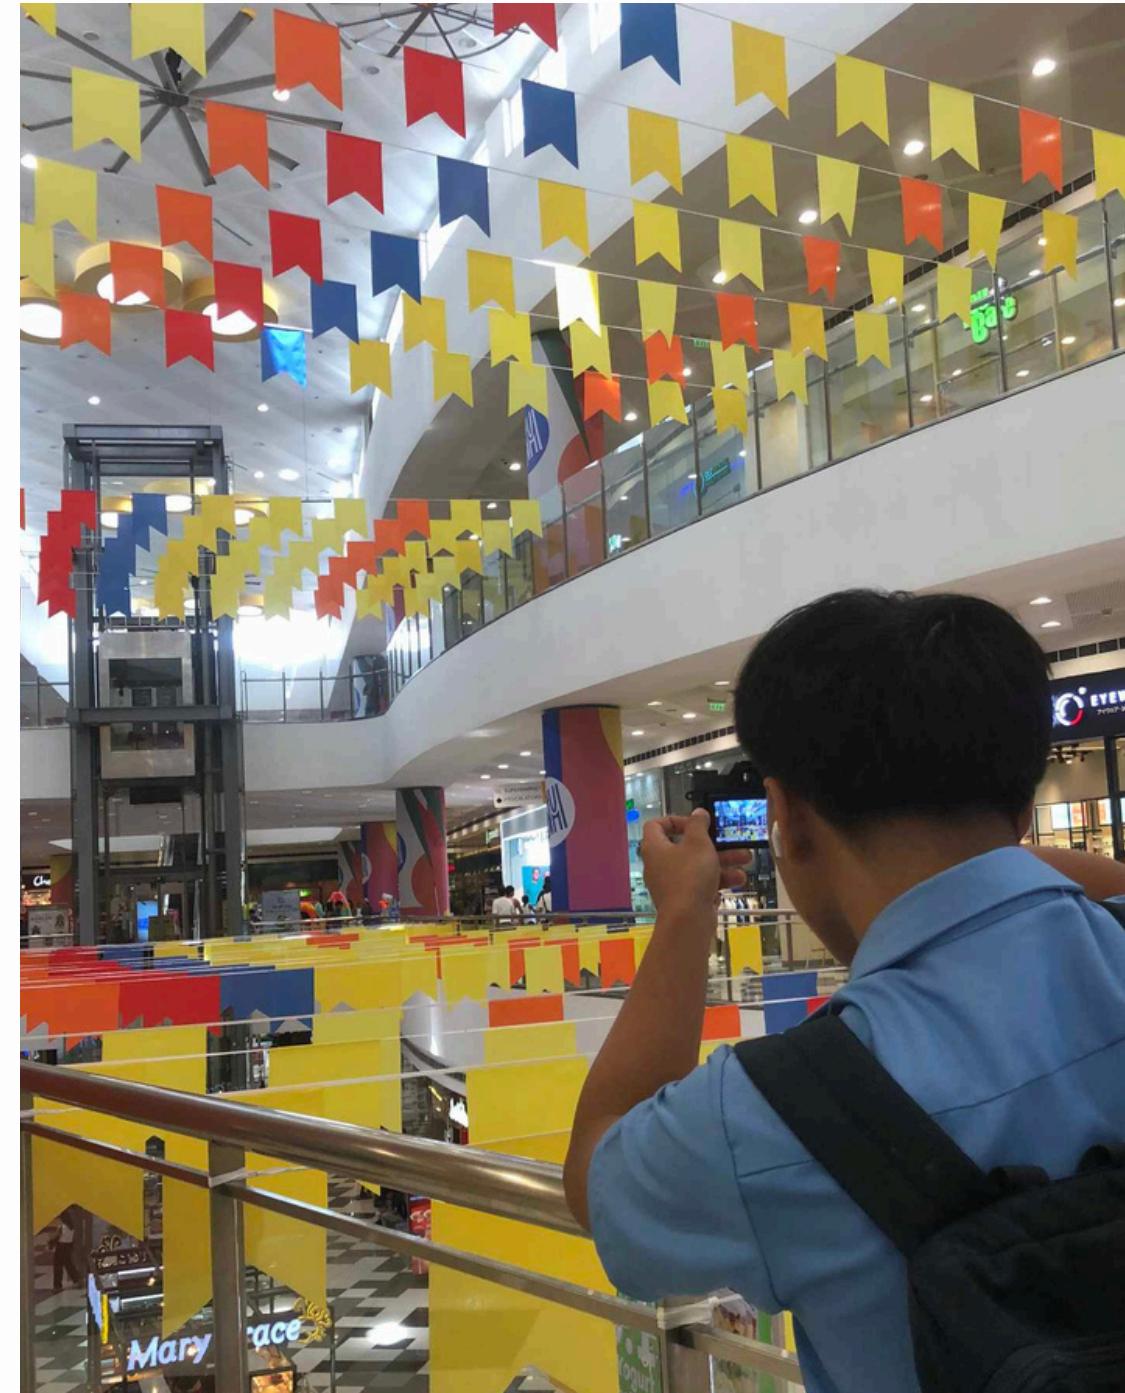

Shooting landscapes reminded me to slow down. Nature doesn't beg for attention—it simply exists, sprawling in silent majesty. As I stood before open skies and rolling scenery, I was struck by a strange peace. It's humbling to frame a view that's been there long before me and will outlast every photo I take.

The horizon, vast and patient, taught me the value of perspective—how stepping back can reveal just how beautiful and expansive life can be.

~ Rolando Mabasa III

“THE EARTH DOESN’T RUSH—AND STILL, IT MOVES US.”

BEHIND THE SCENES

BEHIND THE SCENES

